My assumption is, that it worked in this example since:

- The camera was placed at an angle, which displayed five corners, of the box geometry. Icp therefore could match the two pointclouds .

- If the camera angle would display less corners, and be recorded from the front for example, a match would be more unlikely.

- Any object obscuring a part of the box would cause difficulties with the matching as well.